Hahahahahahaha.
I'll be frank with y'all.
Im sure most of us had at some point the thought of quitting when it got tough. Asked ourselves "what are we even doing here?"

But that's when I want you to take a step back and remind yourself of why you are here. Remember why you started. Think about it when you feel like giving up.

Its true things will get tougher, but that's what makes it all the more worth it. Its like that saying `when the going gets tough, the tough gets going`

But even the tough need space to talk it out and relax, so when that time comes make sure to take ample rest and dont deny that from yourself.

I digress, the thing that keeps me from quitting is 42 itself. This community has been wonderful, Ive connected with so many different types of people here from various walks of life in the span of only 1 week.

Who knew the toughest trials, would bring out the best in us? So no, I aint quitting, cause to me 42 is life. (edited)

PISCINE EXPERIENCE

WHAT DID YOU LEARN DURING THE PISCINE?

From my experience in 42KL, I hope this program will still continue throughout the years, and be implemented and reviewed by education system in Malaysia. This program is good on trying to teach a student to be independent, so they will not be so shock to go into working environment. I have also learnt my limit on trying to absorb new knowledge on my own, especially coding which is very new to me starting from the root. Looking back at my progress throughout the program, I think I have learnt the pinnacle of coding more than maybe a 1 year conventional way of learning program. I hope I can still continue and be an alumni from this program.

I'm really grateful and lucky enough to be part of the Piscine, be it coding knowledge, soft skills and peers engagement, this entire 42KL environment really grows me a lot and I am very inspired by all the hardworking coders here. It's really scary at first, as I felt like I'm throwing myself to the ocean by subscribing to the piscine, but then after the first week, it just wasn't that bad after all. It's really to gungho-ness of everyone that motivates me and keeps me going

WHAT DID YOU LEARN DURING THE PISCINE?

I feel that the Piscine has a similar structure to what goes on in a small team in the startup space. Everyone is working on their own problems; there's no real mentor figure to learn from; you struggle to deliver certain objectives on time, be it due to unexpected obstacles or communication issues; there's regular check-ins on your progress in the form of the exam. I'm sure there are more parallels to be drawn, but I really think the Piscine really emulates what goes on in the startup space should you enter it blind. 11/10 would recommend to friends and family.

The 42KL is really one heck of an experience. Where do I start. Whatever i write shall be whatever that crosses my mind. The experience is really hard to describe as it is really unique. I have learn that the piscine pushes me to learn many things with my peers. The progress would be impeded without the peers. If I were to just go solo and do my work, it would not be the right thing to do at all. This can even be applied in work in fact. The current working culture is always really selfish, I do me, they do them. If 42 culture is in every work place. Everything would be so smooth.

PISCINE EXPERIENCE

int main (void){

The past one month was very exhausting yet refreshing. As we were constantly places out of our comfort place, the sense of achievement from getting through each hurdle multiplies immensely;
Coming from a non-coding background, this short one month is enough to know if pursuing programming field is suitable for me or not;
42 has helped me develop my disciple and gave me the ability to do so much. though it wasn't a long time, I already feel like it'll be a waste if I don't continue learning how to code.

I'll probably be writing like this from now on...

42 is not about programming, it’s about learning about myself.
