Science & Arts Festival

As part of its aim to develop well-rounded youth knowledgeable in both science and arts, Sunway College held a Science and Arts Festival on 21 February at the College campus.

YBhg Dato' Chew Chee Kin, the Managing Director of the SungeiWay Group, as patron to this educational programme which was the brainchild of ALCOM '97 ('A' Level Committee), was present to officiate the opening of the festival.

Included in the programme of the day were informative and interesting workshops and demonstrations on painting, calligraphy and drama led by talented professionals. Another highlight of the festival was the literary and history dinner. Several other competitions, including a general knowledge quiz and a science exhibition had also been organised as well as interactive games designed to build confidence, cooperation and creativity.

The purpose of this festival was to cultivate an interest in science and arts and to revive a love of the arts in a world of modern technology. It was hoped that, through this festival, students would realise their talents and live up to their potential which may produce future Nobel or Pulitzer prize winners.
